A Century of Care

As we mark the centenary of the Julia Morgan Building, we reflect on a remarkable blend of change and constancy.

A century ago, the San Francisco Ladies Protection and Relief Society pivoted. After serving as an orphanage, federal funding ceased. The board repurposed the Society to care for elderly and infirm women, commissioning Julia Morgan to design a building for them.

Over the ensuing 36,800+ days, while many changes have occurred, the core mission of care has remained. Imagine: roughly 110,000 breakfasts, lunches, and dinners served within these walls. Countless interactions – chats with nurses, apartments cleaned, pictures hung – represent consistent dedication across the decades.

This ability to adapt while maintaining steadfast service is the Society's hallmark, a testament to the enduring vision of successive boards, staff, and volunteers. It also honors Julia Morgan, whose design created a structure that has gracefully weathered time and adapted to evolving needs.

Now, as another pivot approaches, may the Board, residents, and staff embrace the future with the same blend of flexibility and consistency that has defined this institution for the past one hundred years.

Celebrating the 100th Anniversary of the Julia Morgan Building

Mary Linde, CEO

Welcome, everyone! I'm delighted to have you here as we celebrate the 100th anniversary of this remarkable landmark, the Julia Morgan Building. Yes, look around you, she's a beauty!

Before I share a few words, I'd like to take a moment to recognize some special individuals. First, a heartfelt thank you to Supervisor Stephen Sherrill for joining us today and for honoring this occasion last week at City Hall. His proclamation officially designates March 27, 2025, as Heritage on the Marina Day—a truly meaningful tribute!

We are also pleased to have representatives from the offices of Speaker Emerita Nancy Pelosi and Assembly Member Catherine Stefani joining us briefly.

A special thank you goes to our dedicated board members, both past and present. Your leadership and guidance are invaluable—not only in preserving Julia Morgan's legacy but also in ensuring that we remain strong stewards of our resources and continue to serve San Francisco for another century.

We are gathered here today because, in 1853, the San Francisco Ladies' Protection and Relief Society was founded to support women and children in need. As their mission expanded, they entrusted Julia Morgan to design a home—a true refuge for those who lived here. Throughout this building, you'll find symbols of care, compassion, and love, intentionally placed by Miss Morgan herself. In a few minutes, our very own resident, Theo Armor, will share more about these symbols and their significance.

One such symbol is the Tudor rose. If you notice members of our planning committee wearing gold rose pins, please take a moment to thank them for their tremendous work in bringing this celebration to life. I'd like to give a special shoutout to Angie Lam, our Director of Dining Services—she's the driving force behind today's incredible food, drinks, commemorative cookies, and even the stunning ice sculpture. Angie and her amazing team deserve a huge round of applause!

Today, we not only honor this extraordinary building—where so many of us live and work—but also the vibrant life that has flourished within its walls for the past century. I encourage you to visit the second-floor Resident Art Gallery, where our residents have created a beautiful and inspiring display reflecting the heart of this community—a vision that began with Julia Morgan herself. A special thank you to Doris Howard, Margaret Jacobs, Eleanor Bissel, and Board Director Cynthia Barton for making this exhibition possible.

We are also here to ensure that this legacy continues. Your generosity sustains our mission, allowing us to serve future generations in this magnificent building. I am deeply grateful to our many event sponsors—please now refer to the back of your program for a full list as I acknowledge each of them.

Thanks to their generosity, this event raised almost $51,000 in sponsorship funds. A huge thank you to all our sponsors!

I also want to extend our gratitude to Woody LaBounty and SF Heritage for featuring us in their March newsletter

A particularly special guest today is Cathy Wilson, who lived in the Julia Morgan Building from 1947 to 1949 when it was a convalescent home. We believe Cathy is the last living person to have resided here before our transition to serving seniors in retirement. Cathy, we are truly honored to have you here today to celebrate your former home.

And finally, before introducing our next speaker, I want to acknowledge someone very dear to us. Like this beautiful building, our beloved resident Carm Arbura is also celebrating 100 years this year. Carm, you are a treasure—just like this place we call home. We are fortunate to have three more centenarians living here (they are all well past 100!): Betty Dowell, Enid Leff, and Margaret Johnson.

Now, it is my pleasure to invite Carolyn Kiernat, Principal at Page & Turnbull, to the podium to speak about our landmark design.

What is Julia Telling Us?

Theo Armour

Greetings Supervisor Sherrill
Felicitations Architect Kiernat
Hello Chairman Randy and board members, distinguished residents, team members and fellow citizens

Many of you have walked past or even inside this building countless times. But have you ever - truly - looked at it? Have you noticed how unique and special this mansion is?

- Have you noticed that the garden extends the entire length of a city block? It has fronts on three streets. Francisco, Laguna, and Bay There's no other mansion with a garden like this in northern San Francisco.
- And did you ever imagine that the fence, gates, the path, the planting, the steps all remain exactly as they were — back in 1925?
- Did you ever consider that the roof is made of stone slates imported from Belgium? Not just a fake front slate roof. The entire roof is slate!
- Have you ever felt that the building might be earthquake-resistant? Tom! Can you knock on that column? What's it made of? Tom says: "It's solid!" The bricks wrap around a core of reinforced concrete.

View of the back of the building from McGinley terrace

- Did you ever walk around the building and say "Gee, it's lovely on every side of the building"? Most houses in San Francisco have a nice fancy front but, on the sides and back, it's just cheap siding. Not in this place!

- Did you notice the building offers hundreds of examples of works of art? The terracotta decorations are part of what is called the "golden era of California art pottery"

- And you probably didn't know that the final construction price was $20,000 under budget.

Well, how did all these lovely things happen? It happened because there was this interesting woman who happened to live on 2229 Divisadero Street between Washington and Clay. About a mile from here. Julia Morgan, a Bay Area native, a San Francisco resident, first woman architect in California. First woman to graduate from the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris.

She did so much, but unfortunately, we know more about her personal life than we do about her professional life. She gave few interviews. As she said: "My buildings will be my legacy... they will speak for me — long after I'm gone."

Over the past five years, as I've walked this campus, Julia has been speaking to me. Julia is a supremely talented "building whisperer". What are some of the special things she whispers about? The style of the building is called Tudor Revival, just like a proper sixteenth century English manor house. That means the decorations are more than just aesthetic. They must carry historic or symbolic meaning. You can think of old-time decorations just as emojis for buildings.

Example. Just above the front door, there are two shields. Unadorned. Just shields. Like for a knight. Well, why do you carry a shield? To protect yourself, of course. But why here? The shields whisper the answer: "Come inside — and the San Francisco Ladies Protection and Relief Society will protect you!"

I've spent a lot of time thinking about the largest decorations: The two large terracotta panels on both wings of the second floor. Each plaque contains three images of a special flower. It's called the Tudor Double Rose. It's the family crest of the Tudor family. This rose symbolizes the end of the War of the Roses, the reuniting of the Houses of York and Lancaster. So, a Tudor rose on a Tudor building makes sense.

But there are more than just two of these roses. As you walk around the building, you begin to see roses everywhere: I can count at least twenty examples of roses in different media: in terracotta, cement, stone, metal, lacquer, wood - and brick. I'm not talking about dozens of roses. I'm talking about hundreds of roses. On every wall of the building Even the Brutalist-style building at the back has roses.

Stone double roses on the Morgan Parlor fireplace

So why does Julia obsess with the rose? What is she whispering? Here is my theory: The rose is an ancient symbol of love. On Valentines Day, what do you send to someone you love? A dozen roses, of course! Robert Burns the Scottish poet wrote: "O my Luve — is like a red, red rose"

In designing this home for women in need, Julia Morgan wrapped them — and us today — in a quiet message of safety, comfort — and love.

And indeed, this message resonates to this day. After these talks, Kindly go up to the art gallery on the second floor. There's an exhibit on the history of the building and the art of its residents. The exhibit is a love letter to the building. From a community filled with love. Julia still speaks to us. Julia is whispering, "You are standing in one of my loveliest buildings in San Francisco"

Let us return the compliment. Let us speak to Julia. Kindly raise your glasses. "Julia Morgan: May your legacy continue to speak to us for many years to come! Thank you Julia Morgan!"

Thank you and have a lovely time!
